Statement of Teaching Philosophy

“My teaching philosophy is that all students are unique and have paramount strengths within themselves. I provide my students with a nurturing environment that allows them to grow academically and psychologically. Building psychological strength is one of my foremost aims while addressing a class. I deliver the class content through hands-on activities, inclusive learning styles, a safe environment, and updated technology. Apart from content delivery, the psychological health of my students remains a priority for me. I deem mentoring a very important part of being a teacher. Mentoring helps me to create a bond with my students that give them the space to develop beyond classroom walls. Teaching comes naturally to me, the presence of my students and the subject knowledge of psychology keeps me driven to explore new teaching pedagogies. ”
